

Proudly the Greeks were the first people to develop the democratic way of life, whose strength in democracy inspired the future powers of the Western world.

Greece gave the world its first great dramatists, historians, orators, philosophers and poets. Among the famous people were philosophers Socrates, Plato and Aristotle, Poets Homer and Hesiod: Sculptors Myron, Phidias and Polyclitus.

The ancient Greeks prided themselves in physical fitness. They developed gymnasiums to practice their favorite sports, which included boxing, wrestling, racing and throwing the discus and javelin. From these traditions the Olympic games were developed. The first games were held in Olympia in 776 BC.

Today Greek families are very closely knit. The father is the central authority responsible for making major decisions, the money making and taking part in local activities. Families are united by language, religion, and respect for their culture. The Greeks continue to be proud people who live in remembrance of a fruitful past and strive for a healthy, happy, and prosperous future.
